Current Responsibility

Jeremy Hoffman is a consultant with the Indianapolis office of Milliman. He joined the firm in 2019.

Jeremy brings nearly a decade of experience in government-sponsored healthcare programs and public policy. He focuses on helping states to conceptualize and build Medicaid programs, drafting and meeting statutory or regulatory requirements, and assisting in developing new program design efforts and implementations to assure successful operation. He is well versed in State Plan and Medicaid waivers, including drafting necessary internal regulations.

Jeremy also has policy experience in behavioral health, childcare, aging, and TANF. Jeremy has helped develop policies around forensic treatment initiatives, state-run health facilities, credential verification organizations, and LTSS reform.

He also has experience developing and evaluating Medicaid eligibility criteria, coverage expansions, and demonstration waivers, as well as developing and scoring RFPs.

Professional Work Experience

Prior to joining Milliman, Jeremy worked with the Indiana Family and Social Services Administration (FSSA) as a Medicaid Advisory Attorney and Deputy Legislative Director. He worked closely with the Medicaid Director and Secretary of FSSA to draft and implement state regulations for Medicaid members and advocate on behalf of the agency for legislative matters in front of the Indiana General Assembly.

Prior to those roles, Jeremy spent time working for the Indiana State Senate, focused on Medicaid and healthcare law with the Senate Committee for Health and Provider Services.

Education

Doctor of Jurisprudence, Criminal Law concentration, Indiana University School of Law

Bachelor of Arts, Political Science-Economics, Anderson University
